DESIGN FOR SOCIAL IMPACT MINOR

BGSU's Design for Social (DSI) minor is a cross-disciplinary structure of 18 credit hours to teach the understanding of design theory, research and practice for implementing social change. Along with graphic design courses focused on design thinking, collaboration, methods, and making; the minor will direct students toward addressing the social challenges of climate change, human rights, health and healthcare, public policy, and social enterprise. The DSI minor will guide students through a human-centered design process that includes invention, innovation and creative problem solving filtered through topics focused on the public good.
